Id. This Court ruled that the Tennessee workers' compensation statute "does not create a defense to a Fair Labor Standards Act claim." Id. at 461. (citing 29 U.S.C. § 2671(a)). The Court noted that it was "entirely logical" that the single employer doctrine should 1 The Court's decision has caused many to erroneously believe that the single employer doctrine is more than a common law principle under Tennessee law. This is incorrect. The single employer doctrine is a common law principle, as it is rooted in the Tennessee Constitution. 4 apply in the context of an antitrust law claim under Tennessee law. Id. at 464. This Court went on to explain, however, that "[a]ssuming, arguendo, that the single employer doctrine applies to antitrust law, the question remains what result follows from application of that doctrine to the facts of this case." Id. at 464. The Court then went on to analyze whether the single employer doctrine applied to the facts of that case. Ultimately, the Court determined that single employer doctrine did not apply. Id. at 465. On appeal, the Sixth Circuit concluded that this Court "improperly dissected the single employer doctrine's contours in the context of
