Q: On a compact metric space X and a compact G -space Y , if $f: X \rightarrow Y$ is compact, is $f \circ f$ compact? Let X, Y be compact metric spaces and let $f: X \rightarrow Y$ be a continuous map with $f(X)$ compact. Then $f \circ f$ is compact. I have been thinking about this problem for the past few days and can't come to a conclusion. Please enlighten me. My best thought was the following: The statement is trivially true if both X and Y are finite sets, so assume at least one of them is infinite. Since X is compact, the identity map on X is also compact. If we could find a continuous map $h: X \times X \rightarrow Y$ such that $h(x, y) = f(x)$ for all $x \in X$ and $h(x, y) = f(y)$ for all $y \in Y$, we would have $f \circ f = h \circ (\text{id} \times \text{id})$ so $f \circ f$ would be compact, but I'm having trouble finding a suitable map h . A: It is not true. Let $X = [0, 1]$, let $Y = [0, 1] \times [0, 1]$, and let $f: X \rightarrow Y$ be the obvious projection. Note that f is a continuous surjection and the inverse image of $Y \setminus \{(x, x) : x \in [0, 1]\}$ is the union of a countable collection of closed sets (since a singleton is closed). Thus X is compact (by the Bolzano-Weierstrass Theorem) and f is a compact map. But $f(f): X \rightarrow Y$ is not compact, since $(f(f))^{-1}(\{(x, x) : x \in [0, 1]\}) = \{f(\frac{1}{2}), f(\frac{1}{3})\} \cup \{(x, x) : x \in [\frac{1}{2}, \frac{1}{3}]\}$

The effect of weather and influenza on emergency department visits for acute asthma in two counties in the United States. To assess the effect of weather and influenza on emergency department (ED) visits for acute asthma. Two counties in Massachusetts. Patients (age 12 or older) with an ED visit for acute asthma, identified as such by International Classification of Diseases, 9th edition, Clinical Modification (ICD-9-CM) codes 493 and 466, were included. Frequent weather data were collected at the weather stations closest to the data collection sites. Influenza-like illness data from the National Respiratory and Enteric Virus Surveillance System were used to identify presence and timing of influenza activity. An interrupted time-series analysis was performed to assess the association between weather or influenza and asthma-related ED visits. The analysis was performed with a generalized linear model with random effects. The ED visits for asthma were associated with concurrent weather factors, especially heavy rainfall, but not with influenza. However, influenza was associated with significantly increased emergency visits for acute asthma. A priori and sensitivity analyses confirmed the results. The results from this study suggest that weather and influenza are unrelated but may play a role in the exacerbation of asthma. Q: How to retrieve a data stored in an already installed Magento extension? I have a small Magento site where a client is asking me to add and display several dozen products. I bought an extension to do that, but in order to do it, I need to retrieve a specific data (the id of the products to be displayed). After some research, I got to know there are tools that let me retrieve information of installed modules, but none let me retrieve the data of an already installed module, does anyone know a tool that works like that? Or any way to do that? A: If you have the developer login information for your site, you can retrieve it from within the administration area. Go to the Developer > Magento Connect Manager Find the extension you wish to retrieve, click on the info button and it will show you what the developer is currently publishing as well as an automatically generated package signature. If you don't have the developer login details, you can submit a support ticket with the extension developer and they can provide you with that information. As a result, I had written a new tutorial on using the canvas api to draw shapes on your canvas as shown below: 5. Automatic Dimensions If you wish
