We have established a continuous human type II bone marrow stromal cell line by cloning of the cells originating from a patient with agnogenic myeloid metaplasia. The cell line, designated KF-II-M(B)12, was characterized by three-color flow cytometry, fluorescence microscopy and cytogenetics. KF-II-M(B)12 cells are CD34(-), monocyte/macrophage-specific antigen-positive and synthesize alpha 1-antitrypsin and vitronectin but not heparin. They form a monolayer sheet with a cobblestone morphology. KF-II-M(B)12 cells are alpha-smooth muscle actin-positive. They do not express an active phenotype except that they synthesize bone-specific alkaline phosphatase. Their ability to differentiate into adipocytes, osteoblasts and chondrocytes is not absolute, however. KF-II-M(B)12 cells show a diploid karyotype, 46,XX. They are histochemically negative for alkaline phosphatase, and the isoenzyme pattern is similar to that of bovine type II cell-like fibroblasts. KF-II-M(B)12 cells form a bone marrow stroma in nude mice, support growth of both erythroid and myeloid cell lines in vitro and form a bilayer sheet. To our knowledge, this is the first continuous bone marrow fibroblast cell line that lacks specific markers of all lineages of bone marrow stromal cells except for fibroblasts.
