While the United States has directed most of its development assistance toward preventing the Taliban from overthrowing the Afghan government, there has been recent funding for development projects in areas inhabited by the Taliban. [20] For a full breakdown of USAID funding by country and the most recent date available, please see USAID Assistance to Afghanistan . For a discussion of implementation and context, see 'USAID Assistance to Afghanistan . The army has adapted to rapid changes in technology and the state of warfare by dramatically improving its military education and training. In the past, the military relied on training only with older equipment and tactics. Though the army is the world's most experienced modern army, it also has significant weaknesses that have prevented it from fully exploiting its combat capacity. Zahir was named as a major financier of the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL), with over $46 million dollars of its wealth reportedly ending up in ISIL accounts. It is believed that the terrorist financiers funded the insurgency because of their own religious doctrines, which were similar to those of the ISIL. The ANDSF has sustained security gains in recent years and the forces show no sign of cracking under pressure. But economic, political, and physical challenges to security and government institutions remain, especially in rural areas. The military and police forces that have achieved stability could be eclipsed by the next wave of violence, as civil war or insurgency resurfaces.

The Afghanistan program, which the United States has also funded for the last five years, has used the U.S. embassy in Kabul as the program's headquarters, however, the embassy is not fully staffed and provides limited support for program management. In 2009, the Embassy-supported program also failed to identify an internal reporting mechanism for monitoring the program's results. 106 When the embassy closed, U.S. funding for the Afghan Women's CBPI was halted in late 2009. Starting in 2009, the U.S. government replaced the embassy-based program with the Afghan Women's Council as the program's point of contact. Since 2010, the Afghan Women's Council has received support from the U.S. Embassy in order to operate the program. Well by definition, acts of genocide have more a "ritual" than a "factual" element. Ritual slaughter not only denotes the intention to kill, it is a necessary component of the act of killing. Other acts of killing, such as murder, are "factual," and by definition "cruel, inhumane, or otherwise morally reprehensible." To be "factual," a killing must be directly and knowingly caused. It is not enough that a killing "appears to" be a factual act; instead, it is necessary to show that the act was actually caused, so that we can be certain that the perpetrator has intentionally and with full knowledge murdered. The magnitude of physical force used by an attacker bears significance to the victim. Acts that cause physical injuries are either "felonious" or "non-felonious." Felonious acts are "acts or threats of violence" that cause physical injuries. It does not matter how minor the physical injury is, as long as it is caused by the act; the law does not distinguish between the severity of physical injuries caused by physical, non-violent force and physical injuries caused by violent, physical force, such as by a machete or shot gun. Non-felonious acts include threats of violence that cause no physical injuries. 5ec8ef588b
